To whom it may concern

I am writing you as a pharmacist and as a person who has come to read and hear Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh's religious teachings. I have done research in pharmaceutical science and biology at different European Universities. I must say that the way Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh understands and supports scientific and technological research is absolutely remarkable. He is one of the very rare persons in this world who has a global approach in this field. He helped me and many of my friends to understand the value of our research and see that science can be, and has to be, part of a new society, without turning it into a cold, mechanical system, and without destroying nature. Rajneeshpuram is in this sense a beautiful example. The very best technology and science is being used there to improve the living, the farming, as well as the artistic performances. And yet people live in harmony with nature, in a creative and loving way.

Yours sincerely,
