To Whom It May Concern,

I am a graduate of Vienna University and I am working as a doctor in one of Vienna's hospitals specializing in cardiology. This field of medicine is - at this stage - moving towards a more scientific and also technical approach to therapy. But still, I work with human beings. And that's more fascinating than pace-makers, echocardiograms, etc. Having to meet so many ill people at the hospital every day, some of them with very severe heart failures, demands not only a lot of medical knowledge to deal with their physical needs, it also demands an ability to give moral support, understanding and love.

"Without love, therapy is not possible."
Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh

This has become my key word for my work. And I know the only way to become a real doctor, the only way to really help others is to reach a state where you are able to share love. Bhagwan has been my Master for two years now, and His messages, His meditation techniques have helped me so much in my daily work at the hospital. Meditations are improving my ability to concentrate, to be self-centered. And thus - in a very intricate way - His teaching is helping the patients of our Viennese hospital.

Sincerely,

Dr. Charlotte Hausmann
