To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to provide my professional opinion of the work of Bagwan Shree Rajneesh. I am a licensed clinical psychologist (Conn. and New York), the head of a large psychology department, and a consultant to many agencies including The National Institute on Drug Abuse and The National Institute of Mental Health.

A friend of mine who is a prominent psychiatrist made me aware of the work of Rajneesh in 1978. Since that time, I have read his work extensively and listened to hundreds of hours of audio and videotapes.

I have been consistently impressed with the work of Rajneesh, on both a religious and psychological level. As a religious leader, he has provided a remarkable perspective on all of the world's major religions. In terms of psychology, I find his work extremely sophisticated and I make considerable use of his ideas and his written and spoken material in my practice.

Sincerely,
Dr. Thomas Todd
