To whom it may concern

I am an orthoptist and took my diploma from the University of Giessen, West Germany. Orthoptists work with children who squint.

Coming out of a family of aristocratic background (my father is Count Keyserlingk, doctor of philosophy and agriculture) I was taught to be always ready to help people in need and distress. There is also a lively and strong interest in spirituality in my family (Rudolf Steiner was a frequent guest in our house, my uncle is Hermann Count Keyserlingk, a well-known philosopher).

While I was working in my profession I met in 1975 a disciple of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh who introduced me to the teachings of this great living mystic and religious teacher who - by now has established world-wide influence and recognition.

I started reading his books and was amazed by the depth and insight of Bhagwan's writings. You can call him a philosopher, a psychologist, a healer and educator - he is all this with very exceptional abilities.

But he is much more. He not only possesses an incredible knowledge in many fields of science - this man k n o w s, he is a sage, a man of wisdom. When you encounter such a man and recognize him you do not remain the same person. Bhagwan changed my life. I became his disciple in 1975. My work gained another dimension. Love became more important than technique.
