To Whom It May Concern,

I am a psychiatric Social Worker with a Masters Degree from Boston University School of Social Work (1982). I work with emotionally disturbed adolescents in a residential treatment program and am beginning a private psychotherapy practice in Boston.

I became acquainted with the work of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh in the fall of 1982 through a small sampling of his books and meditation center near Boston.

His profound understanding of human motivation, potential and the blocks to the fulfillment of that potential has been of great utility in my therapy practice. His insights have added a richer meaning and wholeness to my appreciation of clients that was lacking in my graduate school education.

He certainly is a man of exception ability who has enriched me in my profession.

Sincerely,

Elliot H. Libman
