To Whom It May Concern,

I am soon to become a sannyasin of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, after recently travelling to Oregon to participate in the 2nd Annual World Celebration.

I come from a middle class background (I was a school teacher and am now Branch Administration for DUNLITE, a manufacturing firm.) I am not one to make hasty decisions, especially about anything which seems to be as radical as this step I'm about to take, however, being in Bhagwan's presence each day, during silent communion, dissolved any last vestiges of doubt I had about becoming his disciple.

To read his words, spoken during his discourses given hour upon hour in India, is a special experience, and has helped me in many ways, but to sit in his presence, or to be near him at all, is the most wonderful, uplifting spiritual experience. Words cannot describe it. But, I really feel that I am so lucky to have had this taste of joy.

Having had the opportunity to be near him has made such a difference to my life.
I now feel so whole and loving and so very positive about being alive.

Yours sincerely,

J. Davies
